Manufacturing and Distribution

Tribal knowledge is any undocumented information that is not commonly known by others. This phrase is used in manufacturing and distribution referencing information that may need to be known by others in order to produce quality products or services. The information is frequently critical to quality performance, but it may not be correct. Tribal knowledge can be considered as company property. It is frequently a good source of information in improving manufacturing and distribution processes. Tribal knowledge is absolutely important in the purchase of manufacturing and distribution operations.

The FPS Facility Planners take Tribal Knowledge very seriously in the consolidation and relocation of manufacturing and distribution operations. It is a critical component in our process analysis. Contact FPS to discuss optimizing or relocating your manufacturing or distribution operations.
